Inca Empire. Inca Empire, but ruling a population of Around 10 million people. When the Spanish conquistadors arrived in the 1530s, the Incas were at the height of their power, ruling a vast empire that stretched from modern-day Peru to Ecuador and Colombia. The Inca Empire was a highly organized and centralized state, with a complex system of roads and a sophisticated calendar. The Incas were known for their advanced architecture, including the famous Machu Picchu. The empire was eventually conquered by the Spanish in 1532, and the Inca people were assimilated into the dominant culture.
