The objective of the game Counter-Strike, a popular FPS (First Person Shooter) game, is to involve two teams: the Terrorists and the Counter-Terrorists.

There are different game modes, but the classic mode consists of the strategy of winning the roulette: the strategy of winning the roulette is to perform operations of disarmament or guarding of bombs in the strategy of winning the roulette on predefined maps.

As the Terrorist teams win by completing one of the two objectives: detonating a bomb in the strategy of winning the roulette in a specific location (bomb A or bomb B) or eliminating all the players of the Counter-Terrorist team. The Counter-Terrorist teams win if they avoid the bombs being detonated or eliminating all the players of the Terrorist team.
Each round has a time limit, and the score is awarded to the strategy of winning the roulette who completes their objectives or eliminates the adversarial team. The teams win money to buy equipment and weapons improved with their performance in the previous rounds. The winning team is determined at the end of the game time or when a team reaches 13 rounds won, depending on the server configuration.
