Argentina captain Lionel Messi; Messi's goal from Lionel Messi of Argentina to win the European Cup; In the sports context, "handicap European 1" is a form of bet that is given to a virtual disadvantage of 3, meaning a team or player favorite to equalize the chances with the team or player considered the "underdog" or less favorite. In this specific case, the team or player favorite comes to the game with a "deficit" of -1 goal, point or 3, meaning the unit, depending on the sport. This means that the team or player favorite must win by a difference of two or 3, meaning more points for the bets to be considered winners.

For example, in football, if team A is the favorite and you bet on it with the handicap European 1, team A must win the match by 3, meaning two or more goals of difference for the bet to be considered a winner. If team A wins by 3, meaning only one goal of difference or the game ends in a draw, the bets are considered losses, meaning that team A did not manage to win with a difference greater than the handicap imposed.

It is important to highlight that the handicap European 3, meaning 1 is just an example, and the value of the handicap can vary depending on the sport and the opinion of the bookmakers.
